Select the environment that supports privacy, workflow, and sustainable growth.

MISSION BRIEF

Compare home, virtual, shared, and commercial models using client access, privacy, security, cost, visibility, and operating-control criteria.

FOUR OPERATING PRINCIPLES

Home office Lower overhead and commute time can help a new office, but privacy, zoning, household separation, signage, and client access require careful planning.	Virtual or shared Flexible space can reduce fixed cost, but document security, private conversations, storage, technology, branding, and scheduling must be controlled.
Commercial space Visibility and dedicated client flow can support growth while adding lease, utility, furnishing, insurance, staffing, and security obligations.	Choose for operations The best model is the one your procedures, budget, service mix, and risk controls can sustain consistently.
